UTAH'S ECONOMY CONTINUES EXPANSION IN 2000

Alan E. Isaacson, Research Analyst

Utah's economy continued to expand in 2000; however, for the fourth consecutive year, the rate of expansion slowed. Of 17 indicators tracked by the Bureau of Economic and Business Research, three declined during 2000, up from two declining indicators in 1999. Highlights of Utah's economy during 2000 include:

- C Population grew by 53,540 persons to 2,246,554; the growth rate of 2.4 percent was equal to that of 1999.
- C Non agricultural employment increased 2.5 percent, up from a 2.4 percent increase in 1999.
- C Average monthly nonagricultural wages rose 4.8 percent, up from a 3.8 percent increase in 1999.
- C Nonagricultural payroll wages increased 7.4 percent, up from a 6.4 percent increase in 1999.
- C Total personal income increased 7.7 percent, up from a 5.9 percent increase in 1999.
- C Per capita personal income rose by 2.7 percent, down from a 4.4 percent increase in 1999.
- C Total assessed valuation rose by 7.8 percent, up from a 5.8 increase in 1999.
- C Property taxes charged increased 7.0 percent, after increasing 12.2 percent in 1999.
- C Gross taxable sales increased 5.5 percent, up from a 4.7 percent increase in 1999.
- C The number of new permit-authorized dwelling units fell by 10.8 percent, after a 6.4 percent drop in 1999.
- C Total construction value decreased 0.9 percent, with residential construction value decreasing by 4.4 percent and nonresidential increasing by 1.5 percent.
- C New car and truck registrations increased by 2.6 percent, up from a decline of less than 0.1 percent in 1999.
- C Federal "payments-in-lieu-of-taxes" rose 6.4 percent after rising 3.2 percent in 1999.

Annually, the Bureau of Economic and Business Research examines economic indicators for the past several years to determine local and statewide trends in the Utah economy. State, regional and county level data are collected and tabulated for each of six categories: population, employment, income, taxes, construction and miscellaneous.

Detail tables by county and state totals are presented for a total of 17 indicators covering a broad range of economic activities. In 2000, gains were made at the state level for 14 of the 17 indicators. Comparatively, in 1999, 15 of the 17 indicators recorded growth over the previous year.

Areas of especially strong growth were total assessed valuation, up 7.8 percent; total personal income, up 7.7 percent; nonagricultural payroll wages, up 7.4 percent and property taxes charged, up 7.0 percent.

Distribution of Growth

The Mountainland counties (Summit, Utah and Wasatch) posted strong economic growth during 2000. The region led the state in population growth at 3.9 percent and growth in total personal income which increased 10.9 percent. The region was second of the seven multi-county regions in growth in gross taxable sales and third in growth in nonagricultural employment with increases of 6.4 percent and 4.0 percent, respectively.

Economic growth in the Uintah Basin counties improved from 1999. This region ranked first in nonagricultural employment and gross taxable sales growth. Nonagricultural employment rose 5.1 percent and gross taxable sales rose 32.6 percent. The region ranked second in total personal income growth with a 10.7 percent increase and sixth in population growth, with a 1.1 percent increase.

Percentage changes and rankings by multi-county district are shown in Table 1. Figures 1 through 4 show percentage changes by county for selected indicators.

In Utah's metropolitan counties, growth remained robust in absolute numbers, even as rates of growth for some indicators were lower than in other areas of the state. Salt Lake County led the state in population increase, followed by Utah and Davis counties. Salt Lake County added 17,561 residents, while Utah County added 13,431 and Davis County added 4,840. Collectively, these three counties accounted for 66.9 percent of the increase in Utah's population during 2000. These three counties also accounted for 85.0 percent of the new jobs in Utah and 81.7 percent of the increase in total personal income during 2000. Salt Lake County had the greatest change in gross taxable sales during 2000, followed by Utah County. Davis County slipped to sixth in gross taxable sales growth, behind Uintah, Weber and Washington counties. Distribution of growth in numeric change and absolute numbers by county are presented in Tables 2 and 3.

Population Growth

The rate of population growth in Utah remained at 2.4 percent in 2000, with an increase of 53,540 new residents. Tooele County had the highest population growth rate during the year at 8.5 percent. Other counties with healthy population growth rates include: Wasatch (6.0%), Daggett (5.5%), Summit (4.3%), Utah (3.7%), Juab (3.6%), Iron (3.6%), Washington (3.4%), Morgan (3.0%) and Garfield (2.4%). Counties with less than average growth rates include Cache (2.3%), Weber (2.1%), Sevier (2.1%), Davis (2.1%), Salt Lake (2.0%), Millard (1.8%), Sanpete (1.5%), Box Elder (1.2%), Beaver (1.2%), Uintah (1.2%), Wayne (0.9%), Duchesne (0.7%) and Piute (0.2%).

Population in five Utah counties declined from 1999 to 2000. The greatest percentage drop was in Emery County, which lost 313 residents, or 2.8 percent. Other counties recording declines in population were San Juan, 213 residents or 1.5 percent; Rich, 23 residents or 1.2 percent; Kane, 36 residents or 0.6 percent; and Carbon with a loss of 104 residents or 0.5 percent.

Employment

Employment growth in 2000 was 2.5 percent, up slightly from a 2.4 percent growth rate in 1999. The growth rate in nonagricultural employment was greatest in the Uintah Basin counties, with a rate of 5.1 percent. The Southwest and Mountainland counties also demonstrated growth above the state average, growing 4.3 and 4.0 percent, respectively. The Southeast counties experienced a drop in employment (-3.8%), after growing 1.3 percent in 1999.

Wayne County posted the highest nonagricultural employment growth (10.1%) during 2000. Other counties recording employment growth above the state average were Daggett (7.1%), Uintah (5.8%), Washington (5.3%), Summit (4.6%), Utah (4.1%), Kane (4.0%), Sanpete (3.8%), Duchesne (3.5%), Davis (3.3%), Iron (3.1%), Tooele (2.7%), Salt Lake (2.6%), Morgan (2.6%) and Piute (2.5%). Seven counties showed declining employment during 2000: Garfield (-1.2%), Emery (-1.5%), Box Elder (-1.9%), Millard (-2.3%), Carbon (-3.3%), Grand (-3.6%) and San Juan (-6.9%).

Income

The average monthly nonagricultural wage in Utah grew to $2,401, an increase of 4.8 percent.

Kane County led the way with an 11.6 percent increase. Eight of the 11 counties with an above-average percentage gain in average monthly wage were nonmetropolitan counties: Millard (8.6%), Wasatch (8.6%), Uintah (7.8%), Juab (7.6%), Duchesne (7.5%), Summit (7.4%), and Box Elder (6.7%). Of Utah's metropolitan counties, Davis had a 6.3 percent increase, Utah a 5.5 percent increase, Salt Lake a 5.1 percent increase and Weber a 2.6 percent increase. Three counties experienced a decline in average monthly nonagricultural wage. These were Beaver, down 0.3 percent; Grand, down 3.5 percent and Daggett, down 4.8 percent.

Four Utah counties had average monthly wages higher than the state average of $2,401 during 2000. Emery County led the way with a $2,844 average monthly wage. Other counties above the state average were Box Elder ($2,733), Salt Lake ($2,661) and Tooele ($2,508).

Nonagricultural payroll wages increased 7.4 percent in 2000, after a 6.4 percent increase in 1999. Counties with above-average increases in nonagricultural payroll were Kane (16.1%), Uintah (14.0%), Wayne (12.5%), Summit (12.2%), Duchesne (11.3%), Utah (9.8%), Davis (9.7%), Wasatch (8.9%), Juab (8.8%), Washington

(8.5%) and Salt Lake (7.8%). Nonagricultural payroll wages dropped in San Juan County (-5.3%) and Grand County (-7.0%).

Total personal income increased statewide by 7.7 percent, while state per capita income increased by 2.7 percent to $23,907. Two counties experienced double-digit gains in both indicators. Kane County had gains of 15.2 percent and 17.2 percent in total personal income and per capita income, respectively. Similarly, Uintah County had gains of 12.6 percent and 15.8 percent in total personal income and per capita income

Nine counties posted declining per capita income: Daggett (-21.4%), San Juan (-9.8%), Iron (-9.5%), Tooele (-8.9%), Grand (-8.1%), Garfield (-7.2%), Weber (-3.3%), Wasatch (-2.4%) and Cache (-1.4%).

Taxes

The rise in Utah property values continued with a statewide increase of 7.8 percent for total assessed valuation in 2000 after a 5.8 percent increase in 1999. Counties with sizeable increases in assessed valuation were Carbon (23.0%), Tooele (17.2%), San Juan (17.1%), Sanpete (16.5%), Rich (16.0%), Wasatch (12.2%), Kane (11.9%), Utah (11.8%), Summit (11.3%) and Morgan (10.5%). Counties recording property values rising at rates less than the state as a whole were Beaver (2.8%), Juab (3.4%), Piute (3.9%), Uintah (4.7%), Iron (4.8%), Grand (5.2%), Wayne (5.3%), Salt Lake (6.6%), Duchesne (7.2%), Davis (7.4%) and Washington (7.4%). Three counties experienced a drop in property valuations; Sevier, down 10.1 percent; Emery, down 6.8 percent and Millard, down 3.1 percent.

State gross taxable sales increased 5.5 percent in 2000, up from a 4.7 percent increase in 1999. The greatest increase occurred in Duchesne County with a 33.9 percent increase over 1999. Other counties that experienced a greater than 10 percent increase in gross taxable sales were Uintah (32.5%), Daggett (23.6%), Sanpete (13.8%) and Wasatch (10.2%). Five counties showed a drop in gross taxable sales: Box Elder, down 1.0 percent; Millard down 1.1 percent; Grand, down 2.8 percent; San Juan, down 7.1 percent and Emery, down 8.9 percent.

Construction

Residential construction slowed in 2000. The number of new dwelling units authorized dropped 10.8 percent statewide, while the valuation of new residential construction dropped 4.4 percent. Nonmetropolitan counties had the most significant percentage growth in number of new dwelling units. Counties with the highest growth were Morgan (124.1%), Wayne (51.6%), Iron (35.0%), Juab (12.2%) and Sanpete (12.1%). Although the highest growth rates were in nonmetropolitan counties, the metropolitan counties still accounted for the majority of the new dwelling units constructed. Davis, Salt Lake, Utah and Weber counties collectively accounted for 65.4 percent of the dwelling units receiving building permits during 2000.

The value of new residential construction decreased 4.4 percent during 2000, after rising 2.3 percent in 1999. Morgan (154.5%), Uintah (55.3%), Iron (37.5%), Wayne (30.3%) and Juab (30.2%) counties had the highest gains in value of new residential construction.

New nonresidential construction rose from 1999 levels. The total value of new nonresidential construction rose 1.5 percent after a 16.2 percent increase in 1999.

Miscellaneous

Utahns registered 2.6 percent more new cars and trucks during 2000, up from a decline of less than 0.1 percent rise in 1999. The number of new registrations increased by 2,211 to a total of 86,045. The percentage change varied widely by county.

Payments-in-lieu-of-taxes (PILTs) increased statewide by 6.4 percent in 1999, to $10.4 million. These payments, made by the federal government in order to compensate for the loss of tax revenues on federal lands are dependent upon funding levels established by Congress.

Davis County received $5,637 more in PILTs in 2000, an increase of 25.0 percent. Other counties receiving 10 percent or greater increases in PILT allocations in 2000 were Weber (21.6%), Morgan (20.0%), Cache (13.9%), Juab (12.2%), Tooele (10.8%) and Summit (10.1%).

Summary

Utah's economy continued to expand in 2000 although at a slower pace than in 1999. Utah's economy is growing, but the rate of growth is slowing. Of 17 indicators tracked, three declined in 2000, up from two declining indicators in 1999. Income demonstrated good growth during 2000, although per capita income increased at a lower rate than during 1999. Construction dropped markedly during 2000 with the number of new dwelling units declining by double digits. The majority of the growth is occurring along the Wasatch Front although Utah's nonmetropolitan counties are also participating in the economic prosperity.
